Morsel for Meditation

"The nature of the Church is in the love of God, and the charity of the Church is in the first place the charity of God. True charity is neither almsgiving nor humanistic solidarity nor a form of philanthropy: charity is the expression of God and an extension of Christ's presence in our world. Charity is not an ad hoc function but the inmost nature of the Church...It urges us to evangelize; to put it simply, the Church reveals the Love of God. Often the absence of God is the deepest root of human suffering. And so the Church gives the Love of God to all. Consequently, a Christian cannot perform acts of charity only for his brethren in Christ, but must do so for all men without any distinction."
